

New Hampshire At A Glance

The Granite State contains nearly 1,000 Army Reserve Soldiers specially trained to support the nation at home and on the battlefield. From firefighters in Somersworth to a public affairs detachment in Londonderry, these Soldiers exemplify the motto, "Live Free or Die."

NH CAPABILITIES

- ENGINEER (FIRE FIGHTER)
- TRANSPORTATION
- MEDICAL
- LOGISTICS
- MILITARY POLICE
- TRAINING SUPPORT

Londonderry's 368th Engineer Battalion conducted training on essential combat engineer tasks and skills to include using explosives to remove obstacles and unexploded ordnance during a Warrior Exercise (WAREX). The training allowed Soldiers to observe how to set up, arm, and fire a mine clearing line charge and practice packing, setting up and firing a variety of plastic explosives. WAREX helps troops keep perishable skills intact, which can lead the 368th to saving lives on the battlefield.

In March 2014, Manchester native Master Sgt. Paul Dimond stood in the New Hampshire State House to receive the Purple Heart for his service as part of a NATO Training Mission - Afghanistan 2011. When an improvised explosive device detonated, Dimond, only five meters away from the explosion, quickly ensured that the area was secure and that his team was safe while sustaining injuries to himself.

Only eight days earlier his father-in-law, John Morse, received his own Purple Heart — 47 years after it was awarded to him. Morse, a Vietnam Veteran, originally declined the medal in 1967 while he was recovering from shrapnel wounds in a South Vietnamese hospital.

BY THE NUMBERS

$39,599,088

ECONOMIC IMPACT

359

NON-DOD JOBS SUPPORTED

$11,252,698

NON-DOD WAGES

$29,704,657

DOLLARS SPENT

$20,894,620

TOTAL MIL PAYROLL

$3,153,024

TOTAL CIV PAYROLL

SEQUESTRATION IMPACT FY 16

-$1 Million

STATEWIDE

Londonderry's 368th Engineer Battalion constantly polish skills such as how to set up, arm, and fire a mine clearing line charge in order to save lives on the battlefield.

6

FACILITIES

19

UNITS/DETS

861

SOLDIERS

36

CIVILIANS