

U.S. ARMY RESERVE ANNUAL TRAINING EXERCISES

Every year, typically in the summer, Army Reserve Soldiers, Leaders, and units increase Capability and readiness through annual training exercises. Through collaboration with other Army components and the Joint Force, these exercises enable us to support the Total Force and maintain our combat readiness.

COMBAT SUPPORT TRAINING EXERCISE

The Army Reserve is the Army's primary provider of combat-service (CS) and combat-service-support (CSS). During CSTX, Soldiers and units build capabilities, strengthen unit cohesion and increase combat readiness so we are prepared for today's complex world.

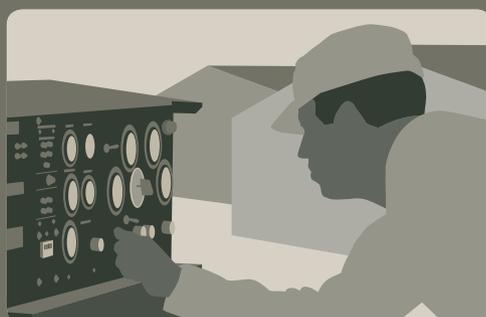

RIVER ASSAULT

Army Reserve and active Army engineer and aviation units work together to construct a movable 300-meter floating bridge across the Arkansas River. This joint training exercise synchronizes collaboration across a multitude of units with varying capabilities.

WARRIOR EXERCISE

WAREX is designed to keep our Army ready to deploy, strengthening our abilities to work collaboratively with the active Army and the National Guard. Combat simulated scenarios provide life-like situations where Soldiers sharpen their individual job skills, work as a team and increase readiness as a Total Force.
